BY KRISTIN A. FULTON

Below are some ideas for discussion and enrichment. Feel free to add your own ideas in the comment box, and I will add them to the list.

If you enjoy the story and would like to hear more from the author, sign up for a promo code for Snake Food or The Haunting. I'll send the code with directions about how to redeem it.

ENJOY!

- On a piece of paper, write down up to ten of your own birthday wishes and explain why you want those particular things. Rate the chance of getting each listed thing on a five-point scale:
 - 1 (very little chance)
 - 2 (some chance)
 - 3 (maybe)
 - 4 (maybe if I'm super good)
 - 5 (excellent chance)
- For fun, cut the wishes into slips and fold them. Put them in a special box or at the bottom of a drawer. Don't look at them again for a whole year.
- Pick two or three people you know. On a piece of paper, write down a few things you think they might wish for. If you get a chance, try to find out if you guessed right by asking him or her.
- Make a birthday card for someone you know. Take a piece of paper and fold it in half. On the outside half, draw or sketch an image or picture. Inside, write a short poem or short paragraph that wishes the person a happy birthday. Your goal is to make the person happy.
- Think about a time when you were expecting something and were disappointed. Divide your paper into cartoon boxes and tell your story in a cartoon.
- Draw something from the story that stuck out for you. Stick figures are okay.
